

Mordechai B. Sahler

LONG ISLAND, NY

Mordechai “Mordy” B. Sahler is an associate in the firm’s Long Island, NY office. He focuses his practice on defending clients in premises liability, product liability, trucking and motor vehicle accidents, construction defects and maritime law matters. Drawing on more than a decade of experience predating his legal career, Mr. Sahler brings a unique focused approach tailored to each client’s individual goals.

Mr. Sahler is a graduate of Emory University School of Law where he served as Assistant Managing Editor for the Emory Journal of Law and Religion. An exceptional writer, his student comment exploring legal claims for discrimination in communal living situations was selected for publication. With an active motion practice, he makes use of that skill on a regular basis with each of the clients he represents.

Upon obtaining his J.D., Mr. Sahler sought advanced legal training at Tulane University’s Admiralty and Maritime Law L.L.M. Program where his studies focused on catastrophic personal injuries in industrial and maritime settings, insurance coverage, transportation and cargo accidents, environmental regulations and the unique aspects of litigating in federal courts.

Mr. Sahler is licensed to practice in New York and New Jersey, as well as the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York.

Outside of work, he enjoys spending time with family, reading, and exploring new places. He considers himself a very talented baker and cook.

PRACTICE AREAS

- General & Premises Liability
- Product Liability
- Construction
- Motor Carrier
- Motor Vehicle
- Maritime & Admiralty

EDUCATION

Westfield State University (B.S., cum laude, 2015)

Westfield State University (M.S., 2019)

Emory University School of Law (J.D., 2023)

Tulane University School of Law (L.L.M., with distinction, 2024)

 MSahler@c-wlaw.com

 (516) 717-0853